University Authority
Quick Reference Guide

Boise State University's authority is given by the State of Idaho. The University claims legitimacy, and justifies the right to exercise the power or ability to influence. Below is the University's structure of Authority:

The University is subject to comply with laws and regulations instituted by higher-government authorities. This includes federal laws and regulations, State laws and administrative rules, State Board of Education policies and procedures, and University policies and procedures.

- The University is a public entity and refers to the tax payers and people of Idaho.
- The University must refer to the constitution of the State of Idaho, which displays or describes who is going to have authority within the University.
- The legislature, which authorizes the funding and writes statutes.
- The Governor, who appoints The Board of Education and issues executive order.
- The State board of education is appointed by the governor with the exception of the superintendent who is elected. The State Board of Education sets policies and delegates authority to Boise State University’s President.
- The President of the University has delegated authority and must follow the line of authority.
